Fairy Tale

There is a guy who always makes fun of people who get engaged recently and he always said these words "I don't understand these people..... Why they get married so early and they don't house and they just find a job". These words were always on his tongue when he heard about young couple that he knows and he always was a rude with people because this behavior. The time was running and he stills the same and after a few years he starts to lose his friends because of his audacity. He was 28 years old and he didn't think about getting married and all of his friends that they are in same age of him were married or at least get engaged. And the younger friends also get married, even his younger brother get married and almost get a baby. He started a business before a few years and he couldn't do without his friends, most of his business income was from his friends and costumers and because of his bad behavior he start to lose everything, friends, customer, and income. In that moment of losing friends and having bad income of his business he started to realize the value of his friends and his bad behavior with his friends. He was afraid to be alone so he decide to get engaged and everyone was surprise of his decision because it was the opposite of his principle, which he used to say I'll not get marriage until I secure house and enough money, whatever my age will be. After a few months later he gets engaged and all of his friends were with him in that night to support him and they were so happy to find him finally getting engaged. A few months later everyone notes that his behavior with friends and costumers were so nice. Finally, he admit that he was wrong and he is sorry for what happened and now he is one of people who urge to marry early and he can provide a good example by virtue of his experience.
